INDEX CARDS

We've translated bibliographic information for all Karger serials, proceedings publications, and limited volume series into standard international index card format. With Karger's Index Cards on file, you'll have information concerning title, editor, ISSN, language of publication, last volume, and volumes in preparation for all these publications – right at your fingertips. Ninety index cards in a deck of a good idea. Available on request.

BACK VOLUMES CATALOGUE

Nostalgic when you remember the past? Sorry you missed out on a Karger classic or a particular volume that could complete your information stock? Don't worry. The past – recent or remote – is never lost. Karger has compiled a catalogue of back volumes, providing you with full information for proceedings, series, and periodicals still available. If you'd like a copy of this new Karger Back Volumes Catalogue, we'd be glad to send you one. Just write to us.

WE KNOW YOU'RE SPECIAL

A medical library isn't like any other library. It's a specialized research center with doctors who often demand immediate access to up-to-date information. To provide this information, a medical library relies on its periodical collection, and, in turn, on its magazine subscription agency to insure that its holdings are current and complete.

F. W. Faxon Company provides domestic and foreign periodicals to medical libraries throughout the world. Sophisticated computers insure accurate records and fast service; regional representatives give personal attention to all our customers.

Faxon understands the needs of medical libraries. After all, we've been doing business together for almost 100 years!

Library business is our only business — since 1881.

RULES FOR MLA BUSINESS MEETINGS*

ARTICLE II. Meetings

Section 5. Quorum

A quorum of five per cent of the voting members shall be required for the transaction of business. For purposes of determining a quorum, a person eligible to cast two votes shall be counted as two voting members.

Section 6. Voting

To facilitate the counting of votes, the Executive Director shall provide easily seen voter identification to all eligible voters attending the meeting.

Section 7. Order of business

The order of business at the business meetings of the Annual Meeting shall be at the discretion of the presiding officer, but the business shall include:

Approval of the minutes of the Annual Meeting and of any special meetings of the membership held in the preceding year, but not necessarily of earlier meetings of the current session.

Reception of the reports of the Board of Directors, the Executive Director, the several other appointed officers, and the several committees and representatives.

Action on amendments to the Bylaws (if notice thereof has been given).

Announcement of the election of Officers and the Nominating Committee.

New business.

Section 8. Resolutions

A voting member may offer at the Annual Meeting a complex motion introducing a new item of business only if written copies have been distributed at or before the meeting to each voting member present or by the unanimous consent of voting members present.

ARTICLE XI. Parliamentary Authority

Section 1. Rules

The rules contained in the current edition of Roberts Rules of Order Newly Revised shall govern the Association in all cases to which they are applicable and in which they are not inconsistent with these Bylaws and any special rules of order the Association may adopt.

*Excerpted from the Bylaws, June 1976.

OFFICIAL PROGRAM

Medical Library Association policy states that all meetings are open to all Association members, or members of the Press, with closed meetings, or portions of meetings, held only for discussion of matters affecting the privacy of individuals or institutions.

GENERAL SESSION I:
Management Challenges in Health Sciences Libraries

Moderator: Samuel Hitt,
Director, Health Sciences Library,
University of North Carolina,
Chapel Hill

Sources of Support

Robert G. Cheshier,
Director, Cleveland Health Sciences Library,
Cleveland, Ohio

This paper explores the responsibilities of central network libraries and those involved in networks with them, including financial and service responsibilities. The issues of resource sharing are related both to the style of management required and the services necessary to effect and maintain viable networks and to ensure reasonable and ordered growth, both qualitatively and quantitatively. The fee-for-service is explored as it affects management and examples of how fees modify managerial concerns are included. There are serious constraints on the implementation of fees during times of fiscal stress, and these are described. The issues of generation of funds to fulfill the library's purpose and the sources from which these funds can be sought are explored. Differences between the United States and Canada are described.

Budgeting

William Axford, Ph.D.,
Director of Libraries,
University of Oregon,
Eugene

Attitudes and internal structures adversely affecting library performance and consequently budgets. Performance measurement viewed as the key to changes in both areas leading to greater productivity and therefore, and enhanced social utility for libraries. This, in turn, creating an increased willingness for top-level administrators to invest larger amounts of increasingly scarce resources for library services.

Cooperative Programs

Roderick Swartz, Ph.D.,
State Librarian, Washington State Library,
Olympia

The presentation will concentrate on the programs of a multi-type library network, and how the medical library can participate in such a network. The talk will focus on the various services of a network including resources sharing, cooperative storage, joint acquisition planning, and computer and telecommunication services. Emphasis will be on the benefits from network participation for a medical library, and what the potential barriers are for a medical library joining such a cooperative program.

Monday, June 13

Oh! Canada! Canadian Health Libraries in 1977
Richard Fredericksen,
Memorial University of Newfoundland

Focusing on the sixteen medical school libraries in Canada, the current status of health libraries in Canada will be reviewed. Slides illustrate the features of Canada's major medical libraries, from the Province of British Columbia to Newfoundland. The relationship of Canadian health librarians to professional associations such as the Medical Library Association and the newly formed Canadian Health Libraries Association will also be discussed. Emphasizing the composite picture, the paper should give the average MLA member a better understanding and awareness of the vitality of the Canadian medical library scene.

Big Dividends from Wise Investments: Potential Returns for a Large Health Sciences Library from Communication, Cooperation and Stimulation of Departmental Libraries

Carol D. Kasses
Sue Taylor
C. Lee Jones,
Augustus Long Health Sciences Library,
Columbia University,
New York

Tuesday, June 14

Communication patterns and working relationships between large health sciences libraries and departmental libraries are described. Experiences of Columbia's Augustus Long Health Sciences Library in working with personnel of departmental libraries are discussed. These libraries serve to reduce the demand for common materials on the Health Sciences Library. The results of a telephone survey in which information on the experiences of other large health sciences libraries with their departmental units are also reported.

Library Staff Utilization: The Dillon Model

L. Yvonne Wulf,
University of Minnesota,
Minneapolis

In a 1975 paper titled "Organizing the Academic Library for Instruction", Howard Dillon presented a model of staff organization which is appropriate to academic health science libraries. The model provides for librarians who are active members of the teaching faculty. They are responsible for collections development, reference, resource guide preparation, and workshop presentations. Administration of operational departments is the responsibility of non-librarian staff members.

Establishing an Interface between a Medical School Library and Area Health Education Center Libraries

Charles R. Bandy,
Director, Harley E. French Medical Library,
University of North Dakota,
Grand Forks

Establishing an interface between Area Health Education Center libraries and medical school libraries requires careful planning. Major elements of planning are: the overall plan, needs assessment, resource evaluation, developmental plan, institutional agreements, monitoring and evaluation and publicity. Health sciences librarians need to be well-informed of the changes in health-care delivery and health science education. The effectiveness of the interface depends on the quality of the working relationship of the library personnel.

Meeting the Needs of the Nurse Practitioner—The Librarian's Responsibility

Evelyn Bedard,
Texas Medical Center,
Houston

The nurse practitioner's role in the health care system is reviewed in a variety of settings. Influences which have resulted in the practitioner's awareness of the library as a necessary adjunct to professional life are discussed. The health sciences librarian's sensitivity to the library needs of the practitioner is perceived as a mutually rewarding partnership in the delivery of health care services.

The CHIPS Program: A Health Information Network Geared to the Consumer

Eleanor Goodchild,
Los Angeles County Harbor General Hospital,
Torrance, California
Judith Furman,
Carson Regional Public Library

The major goal of the CHIPS Project, "Consumer Health Information Program and Services/Salud y Bienestar", is a "Health Information Network" geared to the consumer, a public library client or a hospital patient. Funded by Title I LSCA, the Project coordinates the efforts of the Harbor General Hospital Medical Library and the Carson Regional Public Library. The objectives and operational activities are described with the envisioned role for libraries projected in the health education movement.

Health Sciences University Library Directorship 1955-1975

Thomas G. Basler,
Director of Libraries and Associate Professor,
Medical College of Georgia,
Augusta

This discussion presents the results of a study of health sciences library directorship from 1955 to 1975. Changes are noted concerning institutional definition, administrative framework, and library staff. Directors' positions are expressed in the areas of education, rank and status, age, sex, title, experience, and pressure felt. Fifty job functions performed are discussed as to rate of performance, importance, and time consumption for the years 1955, 1965, and 1975.

A Survey of Computer Search Service Costs in the Academic Library

Sherrilynne Shirley,
Head, Reference Section, USC Health Sciences Campus,
Los Angeles

The Norris Medical Library, University of Southern California, has recently completed an extensive survey of costs involved in the provision of search services beyond vendor charges for connect time and printing. In this survey, costs for such items as terminal depreciation, repair contract, personnel time, and supplies are analyzed. Implications of this cost survey are discussed in relation to planning and price setting for computer search services.

Lorraine G. Hirschfeld,

Julie A. Virgo, Ph.D.,
Executive Secretary, Association of College and

In keeping with the provisions of the new Certification Code for more thoroughly evaluating the professional abilities of those entering health science librarianship, the Medical Library Association chose and is moving toward the development of a competency-based certification examination. This paper describes the steps taken in that development, the rationale behind some of those steps, some of the difficulties involved and the objectives set for it.

Bioethical Choices: Genetic Screening and Counseling as a Case in Point

Gilbert S. Omenn, Ph.D., M.D.,
Assistant Professor of Medicine, Center for Inherited Diseases,
Director, Robert Wood Johnson Clinical Scholars Program,
University of Washington,
Seattle

Genetic counseling has been revolutionized by the introduction of amniocentesis for early prenatal diagnosis of genetic disorders. Now it is possible to determine whether a particular fetus has a particular disease, rather than relying upon statistical risks. A precise diagnosis is essential, often requiring extensive search of the medical literature and considerable clinical experience. This presentation will also review population aspects of genetic counseling based upon the screening programs for sickle cell anemia, Tay-Sachs disease, and phenylketonuria, to highlight certain ethical and public policy dilemmas that can arise.

Dilemmas in Synthetic Biology

Virginia A. Zakian, Ph.D.,
Senior Fellow, Department of Genetics,
University of Washington,
Seattle

Recent breakthroughs in molecular biology have been commonplace experiments which allow the manipulation of genetic material (DNA) in new ways. The experiments which I will discuss involve the production of multiple copies of specific pieces of DNA and their recombination with DNAs from other sources. The scientific and social implications of this type of research will be examined.

Allocation of Scarce/High Cost Resources and Social Policy

Belding Scribner, M.D.,
Professor of Medicine and Head, Division of Nephrology,
University of Washington,
Seattle

The allocation of dialysis by a lay committee in the mid-sixties serves as a warning that as medical technology continues to produce new, expensive life-sustaining techniques, these problems may recur in the future. The difficulties surrounding allocation of such resources will be discussed.

Health Care Trends: Clinical and Governmental Problems

William O. Robertson, M.D.,
Immediate Past President, Washington State Medical Association,
Professor of Pediatrics and Director of Medical Education,
Children's Orthopedic Hospital and Medical Center,
Seattle

Viewed over the span of history, the concept of health insurance is a remarkably recent innovation; so, too, is the rapidly evolving role of "government" in underwriting such insurance—or in providing health care services directly. Groups can do what individuals cannot—yet each of us cries out to be seen as an individual. Moreover, technologic innovation magnifies the dilemma for all involved—i.e., everyone on the globe. How to survive in the 'Brave New World' of 1984 will be briefly described.

Information About Your Body: To Whom Does It Belong?

Jane A. Raible,
Executive Director, Northwest Institute of Ethics and the Life Sciences, Human Rights Review Committee, Department of Social and Health Services, State of Washington,
Seattle

The right of informed consent is an area of health care in which Congress, governmental agencies, state legislatures and the judiciary have most actively shaped health policy in recent years. Who owns the information about our bodies? How much information must we be given to make decisions about our health care? Who determines our competency to give informed consent? Complex issues arise at every point of health care for: those genetically at risk, the minor, the mentally ill, the dying, the hospitalized patient, society as a whole. An overview of the issues and trends will be the focus of this presentation on informed consent.

Sharing Audiovisual Resources: The Need for Needs and User Assessment, or, To Share or Not To Share

Tony Kwak,
Media Specialist, Media Resources Center,
Norris Medical Library, USC Health Sciences Campus,
Los Angeles

The AV resource sharing movement is primarily an outgrowth of recent economic conditions and the ever growing demand for such materials in the health professions. But developing a successful program presents many difficulties. Much will depend upon an adequate need and user assessment. For in the end, the needs will justify the program and its users will ensure its success.

The Uses and Potential of Microforms

Jo Ann Bell
Health Affairs Library, East Carolina University, Greenville, North Carolina

A general overview of microform usage in libraries is provided emphasizing the impact of conversion of print materials to microforms on library patrons and library staff members. Diagnostic techniques are analyzed to determine the adaptability of both collections and clientele. Problems concerning the standardization of hardware, selection of the proper microform formats and the use of silver halide, diazo or vesicular films are discussed in-depth.

Accelerating Toward Online Retrieval — Can the Consequences be Anticipated? Evaluated? Avoided?

Janet Egeland,
Vice President, Marketing and Educational Services,
Bibliographic Retrieval Services,
Schenectady, New York

Health science libraries have been in the forefront of the acceleration toward online retrieval since the mid 1960's. Indeed, by 1977 online bibliographic retrieval services have become a routine part of the reference services provided by the majority of the health science libraries in the United States. As is often the case in the rush to utilize a new technology, many of the basic questions regarding the cost effective management and integration of these services in the library environment remain unanswered. Some of the most important of these questions will be discussed, along with a review of the procedures that are required to perform a comprehensive evaluation of these services in a given library.

The User Viewpoint on Computerized Literature Searching

Burton Reifler, M.D.,
Instructor, Department of Psychiatry and Robert Wood
Johnson Clinical Scholar, University of Washington,
Seattle

The computerized literature search will be discussed primarily from the point of view of the clinical and research user. The author's personal use ranges from a brief "student special" search to a several year retrieval with monthly SDI LINE updates including abstracts. The optimal type of search for a given project varies considerably with one's objectives, and the advice and experience of the operator become increasingly important as the subject becomes more complex. Particular attention is drawn to the "evolving" type of search, where shifts in the user's objectives require reformulation of the search strategy. There will also be a brief discussion of an informal poll taken among the author's colleagues concerning computerized searches.

Thursday, June 16

The Controversy Over Change

Alfred N. Brandon,
Librarian, New York Academy of Medicine,
New York

From the pages of present-day library literature, new methodologies and technologies abound! A superficial scanning of the literature may cause naive novices and overanxious progressives in our profession to decide that automation is the panacea for all library ills, and microforms the cure-all for every library space problem. At the other extreme, our stereotyped image views electronic advancements as satanic inspired heresies and fervently hopes they will mysteriously disappear! The discerning librarian harbors neither excessive viewpoint. Instead, his own initiative causes him to study, inquire, observe, and of necessity understand the costs, capabilities, potentialities, and limitations of the technological advances being presented. He evaluates new systems and methods, machine or manual, realistically in terms of increased service output by his library to its clientele. Regardless of scientific sophistication, any system and any machine which do not contribute in a significant way to that one aim have no place in a library. The librarian need not computerize his operation in order to be proficient in his capacity as an information technologist. By streamlining and updating slow, cumbersome, outmoded procedures and policies in acquisitions, cataloging, and serials processing, he can contribute markedly to the speed with which information flows from his library to the patron. To be considered professionally competent, the librarian must be adaptable and receptive to constructive new ideas that digress from the traditional dogma.
